

BONES IN SCHOOL LUNCH

During lunch in August 2024, kids discovered something unexpected—a hard, strange substance—in their hamburgers. Questions have been raised over Sodexo's professionalism in handling food safety when viewed of this troubling situation. Students have been hesitant to eat the burgers because of the extreme worry, which has led to conversations about Sodexo perhaps being replaced as the food supplier. The potential for younger children, such as those in the Foundation Year, to unintentionally swallow such alien items makes the consequences much more worrisome. This incident is a clear reminder of how crucial it is to carefully scrutinise our food before eating. This incident's effects have been felt by the entire class, which has led to anxiety and concern about the possible health risks—including the possibility of food poisoning. Moreover, not even food critics can agree on the possible outcomes. Students generally fear that this event may have detrimental effects on their future and general well-being.
